nQ: Why are some of my Questions deleted and others not? I have this exact question: Unusual behavior of text when switched between document and Excel (invisible pixels at bottom), that was deleted and not an answer. If you check the comments, it says "this is a poor question" and in chat, another user said "it's probably a dupe". In my opinion it's not a bad question, it's simple, clear and shows some effort to solve. I think it's not a duplicate because of the answer I received, and it's not a poor question either. A: It was deleted for the reasons cited in the flag it was raised on. [Identification of genes involved in the production of tetracycline and chlortetracycline resistance in Streptomyces rimosus and Actinoplanes utahensis]. Fluorescent and field inversion gel electrophoresis were used to identify the genes involved in the production of tetracycline and chlortetracycline resistance in two strains of Streptomyces and Actinoplanes. The absence of the Hte protein was shown to be the main cause of the tetracycline resistance in Streptomyces and to be the only factor determining the mechanism of tetracycline resistance in Actinoplanes. The investigation of fluorescence reveals the genes coding for the Hte protein to be present in both tested Streptomyces. The absence of fluorescence indicates the absence of the Hte protein gene in Actinoplanes.

A two-component regulatory system of tetR and tetA genes was shown to be responsible for the tetracycline resistance in Streptomyces. The existence of a single gene coding for chlortetracycline resistance in Streptomyces rimosus is shown to be due to an incomplete operon.
