I also had the DInput898 (default) ver. As I was very frustrated of this problem, I posted a thread on “XBox360DInputAPI.dll API Error” on XBOX360FANS.COM! The more I tried to get this to work, I ended up finding a Microsoft forum post that stated that this was a driver bug on Microsoft's side. However, I made a comment about that, and still could not get any response from Microsoft, nor could I find another way to get this to work. In fact, Microsoft did not even reply to this comment. But eventually, one person did write a DLL for it that I could use! After I download it, and got a working instance of it, I ended up placing it on my FTP server, and made it available on a remote website! I tried to install this on my computer, but I had an error, so I was unable to. However, I was able to use it on Windows XP SP3 with the MS DirectInput Emulator installed on my computer. Now, I can play GTAIV on my computer without ANY problems. Thanks to this, I am able to play my XBOX 360 in a more portable way. It is about 30% smaller than the original, though.
